

Taxi ordinance debate continues in Waveland

BY TRACI BONNEY
 Taxi operators Carol "Pan-those" Landry and Michael Byrd reopened a discussion Tuesday about the vehicle for hire ordinance the Waveland board of aldermen adopted November 18.

After the aldermen had approved the minutes (with Stan Weidman dissenting because he disputed their accuracy), the bills (unanimous), Planning and Zoning Commission recommendations and travel (both also unanimous) chairman Barbara Rappold called on the agenda requestors.

Rappold chaired the meeting on behalf of Mayor Stella Frilot, who was attending the National League of Cities meeting.

Earlean Washington, the first to speak, asked for use of the Civic Center for the Watch My Child program, an educational/recreational program targeting school students and dropouts. Rappold told her the Civic Center is currently unusable, but suggested she consider other places.

Police Chief James Varnell suggested the courtroom be used when court is not in session, and Curtis P. "Phil" Colson said the library meeting room might be a good alternative.

Next was Louis Hardy, who asked for a taxi operators license. The board voted to approve issuance of the license, as long as Hardy purchased the $300,000 liability insurance required, and shows proof after December 18 that he is complying with the city's new vehicle for hire ordinance.

That ordinance was adopted at the second November meeting, when Frilot voted to approve it and broke a tie between the "yes" votes of Rappold and Bob Hubbard and the "no" votes of Colson and Weidman.

The ordinance, which becomes effective December 18, places into law regulations uniform with those adopted by the City of Bay St. Louis. The Waveland ordinance was adopted by city attorney Lucien Gex from the Bay St. Louis law.

Landry spoke to the board after Hardy, and accused the board of not having reviewed the ordinance they adopted. He questioned the need for the ordinance, especially those provisions calling for $300,000 of liability insurance and the installation of meters in the

Theme park crosses first hurdle

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

Mississippi Motorsports Park, Inc. received conditional approval on a 15,000-acre theme park concept by the county planning commission Wednesday.

Attorney John Scafide reported the commission will recommend support of the concept to the board of supervisors Monday.

Stephen L. Guice, president of Motorsports Park, requested county support of proposed legislation which will outline the issuance of debt instruments and secure obligations, along with establishing water, sewer, fire, waste and road regulations for the park through the creation of a municipal corporation.

According to Guice, the proposed DeLisle Improvement District bill has been based upon the Florida 1967 Reedy Creek District bill, used in the creation of Disney World.

Scafide said the commission supports the project with the following stipulations:

—proposed legislation does not infringe upon the authority of, nor adversely affect, any agency of the state, the county or either city.

—proposed legislation does not change any current or future ordinance or regulation;

—and that no additional taxation be levied other than on Mississippi Motorsports Park, Inc.

The recommendation adds, prior to becoming law, the public hearing process must be observed and reviewed, and the board of supervisors be permitted review of legislation and final power of implementation determination.

Guice presented the commission with maps of the proposed areas November 19. He stated Friday that public viewing of the exact locations will be revealed within a few days.

According to previous reports by Guice, over half of the development, 10,000-acres, is planned for Hancock County north of I-10 from Diamondhead to just west of Highway 603, with 3.34 miles of the area extending into the buffer

Bay resident murdered, Hancock resident held

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

Hancock County Chief Deputy Delbert Seay reported the arrest of county resident Rancy J. Gambill, 23, in connection with the Friday murder of Randy R. Juliao, 22.

Seay stated, Gambill, 1191 Bell Creek Road, was arrested by deputy Nathan "Corky" Hoda Jr., after discovering the body of Randy R. Juliao, 208 Carroll Ave., Bay St. Louis, in the dining area of Gambill's home.

"When Hoda arrived," he described, "Gambill was standing outside the house leaning up against a car with a gun and Juliao's body was lying inside the house."

"Juliao appeared to have been shot with a 12-gauge shotgun."

According to Seay, the sheriff's department received a call approximately 11:28 p.m. from one of Gambill's neighbors, claiming to have heard gunshots from the his house.

"Juliao appeared to have been shot with a 12-gauge shotgun."

Seay said, Kevin Lane, also of 1191 Bell Creek Road, was reported to have sustained gunshot injuries to a leg and hand. "It seems Lane was an innocent bystander."

Lane was reported taken to Memorial Hospital of Gulfport.

Seay said Gambill told deputies there was a dispute.

Gambill remains in the Hancock County Justice Facility charged with murder and awaits an initial appearance Monday in Justice Court.

He is an active member of the Hancock Chamber of Commerce, the Retired Senior Volunteer Program Executive Committee and the Bay St. Louis Rotary

FAA approves passenger service at Stennis Airport

The Federal Aviation Administration has approved Hancock County's certification request to allow limited passenger service at Stennis Airport. FAA approval means that the newly established charter flights arranged by Casino Magic can use Stennis Airport, which is minutes away from the gaming resort in Bay St. Louis. The flights had been using Gulfport/Biloxi Regional Airport.

The approval was given this week by FAA officials, according to Harold "Buz" Olsen, executive director of the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission. The commission is the county's economic development agency that oversees operation of the county-owned airport.

In preparation for passenger service, the Commission renovated the terminal building and added new striping to the 8,500-foot runway.

Olsen said he expects the first passenger service to begin as soon as negotiations are completed with Casino Magic.

The Hospitality Network is staffed by professional operators 24 hours a day, every day of the year. Using communications and computer equipment, the Network tracks room availability with an on-line system. Coast visitors can book the room any time, day or night.

Most first-time visitors don't know all the lodging facilities on the Coast, and repeat visitors may have difficulty finding an available room. Hospitality Network has complete listings for all participating properties.

To make a confirmed reservation, call either phone number listed above, and request a room. Operators will match the request with the best available room and book the reservation.

The Hospitality Network's service is free to callers. It is a service of Gulf Coast Data Services, a Gulfport-based company.

Another service, Charter Network, books charter fishing reservations.

"QUOTEABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

We appear to have an epidemic of 'one-eyed' vehicles on our highway in Bay St. Louis.

Early Friday morning, while traveling the two blocks between Carroll Avenue and Main Street on Highway 90, I encountered three autos and one pickup truck with only one headlight operating.

In the two-block distance I only encountered seven vehicles, and the number with faulty headlights is a very high percentage.

As I got onto Highway 90 traveling west, there was an auto followed by a pickup truck, each with one light operating. I saw two more autos before I reached the light at Main Street in the same shape.

Thank goodness that is not the normal percentage of vehicles operating illegally on our highway, but it is really alarming.

Operators of vehicles should, on a regular basis, check their headlights to see if they are both operating.

I realize it is easy to have a light go bad because of a burnout or being struck by a rock.

At night on two-lane roads it is very hard to determine which side of a vehicle the light is operating on when one is out of commission.

This could very easily cause an accident, and we already have our share of them.

If I am not mistaken, it is illegal to operate an auto or pickup truck with a headlight not working, and the driver could be cited for a violation.

The Hancock Chamber of Commerce's office in Bay St. Louis has a special Christmas tree in its office. Residents are asked to bring a Christmas gift or non-perishable food items to place under the Christmas tree.

The toys are to go to the Hancock County Doll and Toy Fund, and food will go to the Hancock County Food Pantry.

It is always good for us to help others who may be in need, as we never know when we may need help ourselves.

While on the subject of Christmas, we should not forget about the many activities underway in the area for the days prior to the big holiday.

This afternoon will include the Tour of Churches by the Hancock County Historical Society from 1 to 3 p.m.

In case you are new to the area, the Historical Society's home is located on Cue Street across from the Hancock County Courthouse in Bay St. Louis.

There will be refreshments and maps of the area for the churches included in this special tour.

Tonight from 5 to 8 p.m. will mark Waveland's Festival of Lights on Coleman Avenue.

I have seen city workers out several times in the past few days while in Waveland preparing Coleman Avenue for this festive occasion.

There will be all types of live entertainment, and several merchants will have open house with refreshments and goodies.

There will even be trolley rides, and it sounds like a fun time once again in Waveland.

I will be waiting to see Santa light the big bonfire on the beach as a finale for the evening.

On Wednesday, the Bay High SADD chapter will present its second annual Talent Show.

Tickets are $2 for students and $3 for adults from SADD members or $3 students and $4 adults at the door of the school's auditorium.

Sounds like an entertaining evening, and the entrance price goes to a very special student organization.

Bay post office expands hours

The Bay St. Louis Post Office is extending business hours during the holiday mailing season, said Postmaster Jimmy Moore.

Moore announced Bay St. Louis is among 5,200 postal locations across the United States that will be open longer hours in December, especially on shopping weekends.

The post office has expanded Saturday hours on the 12th and 19th and will offer window service from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Expanded hours on weekdays will be 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Dec. 23, Moore said.

"We are also adding transportation and using other resources to insure that this holiday mailing season people in the Bay St. Louis area receive the highest quality service from their postal service," Moore said.

As an adjunct to budget reforms, his proposal will try to identify areas where the state can get out of operating public facilities and turn them over to the private sector.

Immediately there comes to mind the Mississippi Memorial Stadium in Jackson which has become a white elephant; the two state-owned agricultural lime plants in east Mississippi; and, possibly, the State Port at Gulfport, as well as the state grain elevator at Pascagoula.

Patterson maintains that the state can get more value for the dollar if funds are allotted to agencies in a lump sum and "let them manage" them. This, he says, would eliminate the state (substitute the Legislature here) micro-managing how money is spent.

Incentives would be built in to this system for the department of be able to save money and bank it for future use. Now, he contends, state agencies are under a compulsion to spend all the money they are allocated or lose it.

The state Auditor's idea for prioritizing the state budget would create a "first tier" of government funding including such items as public education, health, safety, and economic development. This tier would be given full funding before departments in the lower tiers.

Essentially, Patterson has task forces made up mostly of volunteer experts from the citizenry preparing a plan with a three-fold thrust:

First, prioritization of state spending; second, installing performance-based budgeting (rather than a program approach) which sets goals for each agency; and third, a mechanism to measure what state agencies have accomplished with the funds given them.

Despite previous efforts to put the preparation of the state budget on a more scientific basis ("zero based" and "program" budgeting) the Legislative Budget Office, known in legislative parlance as LBO, still uses the same crude, arbitrary methodology it was using 30 years ago.

What the lawmaker members of LBO piously refer to as "guidelines" for the development of the proposed budget by the staff are so nebulous as to be non-existent. About all the LBO analysts do (they have only 30 days) is sit at their desk and add and subtract numbers from what the various agencies submit.

No pre-audits or field work is done on the numbers submitted by the agencies. One thing the LBO staff is cautioned not to do is cut any 100 percent federally funded positions. But if the feds cut back on the funds, the jobs are lopped off by the state.

What is hilarious since the state Supreme Court ruled in 1983 that legislators could not serve on the State Budget Commission and the governor had the right to submit his own State Budget, we now have two budgets submitted to the Legislature—the governor's and LBO's.

The Legislature has seen to it, however, that the governor has very little staff to really prepare a comprehensive independent budget, so much of his budget is a carbon copy of the legislative recommendations.

But there is statutory power in the Fiscal Management department under the governor's office now to require state agencies to set performance goals and measure their accomplishments, as Patterson is advocating, if the governor only would utilize it.

sent and the energy of the new Mississippi, and to look to the future, to the promise and opportunity that lie ahead."

Thalia Mara of Jackson is serving as executive director of Mississippi Homecoming, with the assistance of numerous volunteer committees. Mara, internationally known ballet teacher and educator, is best known to Mississippians as the person responsible for bringing the International Ballet Competition to Jackson.

The week will be a celebration of Mississippi—it's people, its natural beauty, and its diverse cultural heritage in art, music, dance and crafts," said Mara. "The Homecoming includes activities for all ages, and we encourage everyone to attend their community's events and then come to Jackson."

Across the state, various events will be held on Dec. 8 and 9 in conjunction with Mississippi Homecoming. Local arts exhibitions, children's activities, and festivals will be some of the programs held in communities around Mississippi.

On Dec. 10, the "Statehood Celebration" will include a theatrical reenactment of the events of Dec. 10, 1817, a salute to state and national civic, business and industrial leaders; speeches by current and former political figures and civil rights leaders; and an evening tor-

Easter Seal ornament, card sale helps handicapped

The Mississippi Easter Seal Society's Christmas drive is underway. Five Christmas cards and one ornament, which have been selected to represent Easter Seals in the fight against disabilities, are being endorsed by Governor Kirk Fordice.

The ornament, designed by Mississippi artist Rose Nelson, is a detailed design of the state capitol. It is 14K gold plated over brass, three dimensional and packaged in a velvet case.

The "Christmas in Mississippi" ornament is a limited edition with only 1,000 ornaments produced. Each ornament comes with a numbered certificate.

The ornaments will sell for $12.95 each.

Christmas cards sell for $12 per box of 20. There are five designs for sale: "...Just One Little Candle..." by Mary Lane Reed, "Holiday Decor" by Mark Millet, "Last Minute Shopping" by Rose Nowell, "Behold the Lamb of God" by Linda Werkheiser and "Heavenly Musician" by Jackie Meena.

The five cards, which are reproductions of original artwork, were chosen in a statewide competition of over 40 entries. This is the fourth year the cards have been sold.

The card drive raised over $10,000 in 1991 for Easter Seals, and 81 percent of these funds were used for direct services.

Some of the services Easter Seals provides include speech and physical therapy; rehabilitation of stroke patients, spinal injuries and victims of automobile accidents; purchases of hearing aids and van ramps; a summer camping program for disabled children and the loaning of medical equipment such as walkers and wheelchairs.

For more information on the ornament or for a free color picture brochure of the Christmas cards, call the state office at 982-7051.

Gregory, who flew three missions for NASA.

Gregory praised the 'team' at the John C. Stennis Space Center, adding, "I am here to honor your steadfast commitment to excellence and opportunity within the aerospace community."

He spoke of Stennis' role after Hurricane Andrew's destruction of Florida, commenting, "Following the devastation by Hurricane Andrew, the vice-president enlisted the Stennis Space Center to help the state of Florida access damage caused by the hurricane."

"Stennis researchers flew a specially equipped Lear Jet to map the hardest hit areas. The team used the plane's sensors for digital images both in residential and commercial areas.

"The images were then used to plan and execute the relief efforts in Florida."

Gregory, who spent some three weeks of time in space, told about his experiences on how it was to leave the earth.

taxis.

Byrd, who spoke after Landry, also objected to the installation of meters. He said that he ran a cab service in Atlanta, Ga., for several years, but never had to use meters.

As at the November meeting, Gex stressed Tuesday the need for the city to remain in agreement with its neighboring municipality on the ordinance.

"If we don't have this ordinance," he told Landry, "you can't operate outside of Waveland. If our ordinance is less than Bay St. Louis's, and you comply with ours but not theirs, you can't do business in the Bay."

Gex also said the meters were necessary "to keep the public from being bilked on their fares."

Landry reiterated his opinion that the aldermen should lower the $300,000 liability insurance requirement. He once again claimed that there is not enough cab business in the whole county to justify his spending the money for that much insurance for one vehicle, let alone a whole fleet.

Alderman Weidman brought up once again his concerns, stated at the November 18 meeting, over the designation of the mayor as administrator of the licensing process.

He objected to the idea that the mayor can override the recommendation of a doctor again, allowing a cab operator to do business in the city for a medical reason.

As at the last meeting, Gex pointed out that the clause allowing the mayor to do this only applies to those cab operators already licensed by the city.

Since no motions had been made at Tuesday's meeting concerning the ordinance, chairman Rappold ended the discussion by calling for a motion to end the meeting.

The CBC is conducted across the country and reported to a national center which charts fluctuations and number of birds in various locations, according to Schultz.

The annual bird count is taken three days before Christmas and three days following. "The fluctuation of birds is directly related to survival," said Schultz. "When the number of birds decline, there are problems for man."

In recent weeks, she has discovered several hummingbird species in her own backyard.

Unusual species should be reported to Judith Toups at 896-3153 or Schultz at 467-2473 for verification.

Rocks edge Blue Devils 61-60

Special to the Echo

By Peter H. Martinez
The St. Stanislaus Rock-A-Chaws claimed a win in Carriere Dec. 1 over the Blue Devils of Pearl River Central.

The Rocks had met the Devils previously in the Hancock County Tournament, in which they were dominant with a 54-34 victory.

The only catch was that some of the Blue Devils were on the football squad, which was in the state playoffs.

But, even with the return of some of their starters, the Blue Devils could not hold the Rocks in the final quarter when SSC came back from an eight-point deficit and skinned by PRC with a 61-60 victory.

One of the Rock-A-Chaws' only seniors, David Giannecchini, led his team offensively and defensively with 16 points and 7 rebounds.

Vince Moran also had five rebounds, added five assists and slammed in 14 points.

Shawn Williams, Brandon Benoit and David Giannecchini also added three assists.

The Rock-A-Chaws face one of their other District VIII AAAA rivals, the Iberville Warriors, on Tuesday, Dec. 8.

Coach for both Bay teams is Tom Sumrall.
